At that transition time of life women lose to men their interest but all the sex regard them, then, with envy and renewed tenderness. The tint of the bridal dress, the gold in her hair, the shimmer of her ear drops, the quantity of towels, pocket handkerchiefs, the bed quilts she has cabbaged from her mother and marked with her new name—all the little items take the dignity of religion and cause flatterings too acute for speach but very well denoted by a giggle.

Mr. Lowe advertised the marriage as

[From Harper's Weskly.]
"I say, I say, General Jackson, for fear
you should think I have some axe to grind cause I try so hard to keep you at my poor house all night, I will agree to enter tain you free of expense!" expostulated the landlord of the only inn in the village of Jefferson, Ashe county, North Carolin of Jefferson, Ashe county, North Carolina, to General Jackson, late one evening in the autumn of 18—, as he entered his carriage to pursue his journey towards Tennessee. The Blue Ridge, sir, is infested with banditti, and you will certainly be robbed, and possibly murdered, before morning. I besench you to stay!"

"You are very kind, sir, and I thank you," replied the General, "but I shall proceed, and try and reach the Tennessee line at all eyents. I have no fears of being molested. Drive on, Ned, briskly. Adieu, gentlemen all!" and the old hero drove off at a rapid pace.

"Hillon there, youngster!" cried the landlord to a slim, wiry, flaxen-headed stripling standing in the motley crowd in front of the tavern, "if you are going to Tennessee, you had better jump up behind and you alone with the General it's and you have better jump up behind ind go along with the General; it's as cheap riding as walking."
"Sure enough; I reckon I'd better, and thank you," replied the young man, jump-ing up behind the coach as it drove off. They rode on quietly for some hours until they began to ascend the mountain, when the General, hearing a slight cough behind, called out sternly: Who's that? "It's me, sir-Andrew Johnson. I am a traveler, on my way to Tennessee, and I thought I might get a lift on your carriage, sir. I beg your pardon, sir."

"You are quite welcome, sir, to my carriage. Come forward and take a seat with "Thank you, sir; but as the mountain is rather steep here, I'll jump off and walk He walked forward up the mountain-de in advance of the carriage, but had not gone far before he saw a man ahead of him ascending the mountain. He ap-peared to be intoxicated. He lurched this way and the other way, singgering back-ward and forward; now his knees would double up, and he would miss a step, as if the earth had suddenly vanished before him; then he would cross his legs, and a urch would send him diagonally across he road. He stopped and braced himself up so as nearly to fall backward, and then drifted beiplessly along. Presently be turned an angle in the road and was
